Presidential search committee sets deadline

The Winthrop College Presidential Search Committee has set Feb. 28 as the deadline on applications for the position of Winthrop College president.

The committee approved the deadline at its last meeting, Jan. 7. At this meeting the committee also approved an advertisement that will appear in the Chronicle of Higher Education, announcing the position opening.

According to Student Government Association President Ed Brunson, a member of the Presidential Search Committee, the committee should meet again next when all applications have been received.

Brunson said he does not know when the committee will announce its choice for president or when the new president will take office.

Brunson said the Presidential Search Committee has received approximately 10 applications so far.

"Most of them are from the Southeast. . . many of them were born in South Carolina," Brunson said.

When the six-member search committee was formed in late September, it expected to spend six to eight months in search of a president for Winthrop College.

"It's such a responsible position that we want someone who will serve at least five years," Brunson said.

To help the committee in its search, it held a forum in October to allow students and faculty members to discuss what characteristics a president of Winthrop College should have.

Members of the Presidential Search Committee are Senator Robert C. Lake of Whitmire; Mabel Hamilton, trustee member; Dr. Jack Boger, faculty representative; State Superintendent of Education Charlie Williams, who is chairman of the search committee; and Howard L. Burns, chairman of the Winthrop College Board of Trustees.

Student organizations involved in "Run for the Future"

By LYNN NATIONS
TJ news writer

The Manhattan Rhythm Kings, a swing-type jazz band, will perform a benefit Saturday night to help raise funds for the "Run for the Future."

The concert, sponsored by DSU, will be held in Tillman at 9 p.m. Admission will be $1 with WCID and $2 general public. DSU hopes to raise $350 to $500. Geoffrey Wilcox, chairman of the steering committee for the run, said.

More than 100 students attended the party last Tuesday night to kick off student involvement for the Run.

Ed Brunson, who will run the 80 miles from Columbia to Rock Hill, said over 200 invitations were sent out during break to faculty, staff, organizational presidents and other students.

The committee has raised over $600 since the first two days of the promotional campaign, Wilcox said.

Jeff Mann, dean of students, feels the planning is coming along very well. There are basically two elements to the run, student participation and the Winthrop College Foundation's involvement. A third source of funds will come from alumni.

The Foundation has set a goal of $20,000 to $25,000 for donations coming from industries, Mann said. "The student goal is $1 per student or approximately $5,000," he said.

"I hope that students will pick up on the fact that any effort will benefit Winthrop College and therefore benefit students," he said. "I am not saying every dollar we collect will decrease tuition, but it will help the institution."

Wilcox stressed the size of the donation did not matter. He said campus organizations may use their own initiative to raise money for the event.

"In other words, they may come up with their own ways to raise money, but some ideas are raffles, special t-shirt sales and bake sales," Wilcox said.

For more information, students should contact Terry Livingston, Bill Bradley, Pat Plexico or Geoffrey Wilcox, who are in charge of student organizational fundraising on campus.

The Winthrop chapters of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity and Alpha Delta Pi sorority raised more than $1100 in December to pay apartment rent for Fannie Floyd, a student whose financial aid was cut for this semester.

Dr. Robert Breakfield, professor of business administration and adviser to Sigma Phi Epsilon, said that the fraternity learned that because of federal cutbacks Floyd would not have been able to return to Winthrop this semester.

Breakfield said the fraternity decided that a fundraiser would be an ideal project for Sigma Phi Epsilon and Alpha Delta Pi.

"It was a way for local people to help a local person," Breakfield said.

Breakfield said the goal set for the fundraiser was $1000. The total amount raised was $1175. He said that $950 was used to pay Floyd's room and board. The remainder of the money was used to pay for books and tuition.

"My feelings about what the fraternity, sorority and faculty members did for me was absolutely wonderful and it was certainly the answer to my prayers," Floyd said. "I felt as if Santa Claus had come to me two weeks early."

The Student Government Senate issued a resolution Wednesday night to commend Sigma Phi Epsilon and Alpha Delta Pi Greek organizations for raising money for the continuance of Fannie Floyd's education.

Judicial Board cracks down on crime

By LORI RIDGE
TJ news editor

Student Government Attorney General Barry Brown wants students to be more aware of how the Judicial Board is working to discourage crime on campus and to protect the victims of crime.

Brown said that book theft, which is most prevalent at the beginning and end of each semester, may have increased last semester. Although only five cases of book theft were brought before the Judicial Board, others were settled out of court or dropped for lack of evidence.

"No more book theft cases will be settled out of court as of this semester," Brown said.

"And if a person is found guilty of book theft, they must either give the book or books back or pay the cost of the book(s)."

Other penalties that may accompany charges of book theft include fines, disciplinary probation and written letters of apology.

"Students should be more careful about marking their books for identification," Brown said. "If a book has been stolen, always go to the Bookstore and the Bookworm first, and then tell me."

Brown said, "Violations of school policies and rules will not be tolerated. Any student found guilty will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law."

Once the Judicial Board renders a decision against a student, however, the student can appeal the decision within 24 hours. Appealed cases are usually ruled on by Student Government President Ed Brunson.

In some cases, appeals result in a reduced penalty. In one case, a student threw an object out of an apartment window. The student was fined $20 and put on housing probation for the rest of the academic year.

After appealing the case to the Judicial Board, the student's probationary period was decreased, although the fine remained the same.

Brown said that the rate of crimes this year is about average for Winthrop, although he believes the reason is that students aren't reporting every crime.

One student who did report a crime was an apartment resident whose former roommate owed him money for rent and a phone bill. The plaintiff brought the case to the Judicial Board because it involved a theft of services. The defendant was found guilty and was ordered to pay the debt.

"A student who wants to register a complaint must do it within 72 hours because we have to follow due process of the law," Brown said. There are forms to fill out in the attorney general's office, then Brown conducts an investigation to see if the complaint is legitimate.

"If students come to me, they can be assured I'll do my

Rock Hill hunger run to be held

Sunday is the last day to register for the Third Annual Rock Hill Hunger Run, to be held Feb. 6.

The Hunger Run involves a one-mile run race, beginning at 2:10 p.m. and a five-mile race at 2:30 p.m. from Dinkins Student Center. An awards ceremony will be held immediately after the five-mile race.

The Hunger Run is sponsored by Winthrop College Campus Ministries and Star Paper Tube, Inc. of Rock Hill in order to raise money for local and international hunger relief.

Registration forms for the Hunger Run may be obtained at Dinkins Student Center, G & G Sporting Goods on Oakland Avenue, Bud Welch's Sporting Goods at the Beaty Mall, the Rock Hill YMCA or the Wesley Foundation on Stewart Avenue near Winthrop.

Entry fee is $5 per person. Checks may be made payable to the Rock Hill Hunger Run.

Runners should seek sponsors to pledge money for the race.

Proceeds from sponsorships will be divided evenly between the Pilgrim's Inn, which shelters and feeds abused women, and Project Hope, which provides food, clothing and emergency financial assistance for poor people in the community.

Seventy-five percent of the proceeds from registration fees will go to the Church World Service hunger relief in Lebanon and 25 percent of the proceeds will be given to the Home Delivered Meals program of York County.

In the past two years more than 800 people have participated in the Rock Hill Hunger Run to raise over $3,000. This year a commemorative patch will be given to the first 450 runners who register.

Registration forms should be mailed to Risher Brabham of the Wesley Foundation, P.O. Box 5009 WCS, Rock Hill, SC 29733, and should be postmarked no later than Jan. 30.

Orientation workers needed

By JOHN B. GANNON
TJ feature editor

Applications are now being accepted for persons interested in participating on the Orientation Staff for the 1983-84 school year. Applications are available at the Dinkins Information Desk from January 17 until February 25, and interviews will begin in March.

The duties of the Orientation Staff basically consist of acquainting students, either freshmen or transfer, with Winthrop College, registering the incoming students, helping parents become familiar with Winthrop College, and even living in the dorms with the new students during the orientation sessions.

For someone to work on the Orientation Staff he must meet some qualifications: he must be friendly, informative, willing to help others, be interested in Winthrop himself, be willing to attend all three summer orientation sessions, and be prepared to answer "1001 question," according to Sonya Wolff of the Orientation Staff.

There are three summer sessions during which the staff members will be working, and they will be required to come several days prior to each session. The dates are: June 23-24, July 28-29, and August 24-25. Staff members receive $100 for each session.

Terri Chandler, who was on the staff last summer and hopes to be on it again this summer, felt that the program was "very good, and very beneficial to help students adjust to college life. It's a good program to work with." She personally enjoyed working with other people, dealing with new students and their "spur of the moment" questions. Last summer Winthrop held three orientation sessions for the first time rather than the formerly customary two, and she felt having three sessions was better since the staff didn't have to deal with so many people at one time.

Dean of Students Jeff Mann explained the reason for the three sessions. "It provides more personalized attention and also involves preregistration for freshmen." The type of staff workers needed are those undergraduates, between 13-15 in all, with a 2.5 GPA or better. "Staff members of the last couple years have been extraordinary. We've gotten nothing but praise (from new students and parents)," he said.

During the summer sessions the parents will stay in Bancroft and the students and the staff members will stay in Richardson, while Wofford and Thomson get head-to-toe paint jobs.

For more information call the Dean of Students office at 2251 or Sonya Wolff at 3633.

Semi-monthly checks to come soon

Beginning Feb. 1, all students employed on campus will be paid twice a month.

Geoffrey Wilcox, Senate president pro-tem, brought up the subject of pay before Senate in early December.

Wilcox said, "In these bad economic times it's hard for students to make ends meet. If the professors and staff of Winthrop are paid twice a month, why not the students?"

Dr. Harold Tuttle, vice provost, said, "It came to the president's attention that a number of students were experiencing financial hardships." He said other schools paid student workers twice a month.

Tuttle also said that in order for students to get paid, they must fill out a W-4 form (obtainable at the financial aid office) and get the signed time sheets in on the date the schedule calls for.

"To receive payment on the two-week schedule basis, students must get their signed time sheets in on the due dates," Tuttle said. "Students will not be paid on time if the sheets aren't in."

In order to change the pay system, Tuttle said, "We had to change the administrative procedures and the computer programs that generate student payroll."

"I hope students will appreciate the time and effort that people on payroll are putting out so that students can be paid twice a month," Wilcox said.

Judicial Board

best to treat them fairly," Brown said.

If a student thinks the ruling from an appealed case is unfair, the student can then appeal the case to the president of Winthrop College. However, no student has taken a case that far, Brown said.

The nine-member Judicial Board is carefully chosen by Brown and President Ed Brunson. The board is a mixture of resident and day students of all classifications. To be picked for the Judicial board a student must express a sincere interest in enforcing the law.

Archives exhibit

An exhibit titled "Ireland: North and South" will be on display on the main floor of the Dacus Library January 10-31. The exhibit will include newspaper articles, posters, photographs, brochures, political ephemera and literature collected by Ron Chapesiuk on a recent visit to Ireland. Subjects covered in the exhibit will include the political troubles, the countryside, historical sites of American interest and the cultural life of the island.

Accompanying the exhibit will be two slide shows to be held on January 18 and January 25 in room 18 of the Dacus Library at 7:30 p.m. The first slide show on January 18 will feature the Republic of Ireland and the second will feature Northern Ireland.

Students pull together to make dream come true

Who says our generation is going to pot? Last semester students pulled together to raise money for Fannie Floyd. Instead of complaining about high prices, students gave something of themselves to benefit a fellow person in need.

Alpha Delta Pi sorority and Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity deserve a pat on the back for sponsoring the raffle to raise money for Fannie's apartment rent. But more importantly, the students who bought tickets, who paid $1 out of their pockets, deserve credit.

All one has to do is hear Fannie to know the project was worth all the effort.

"I think it was one of the most wonderful things anyone could have done for me," she said. "I felt it was a blessing, an answer to a prayer."

Students raised Fannie's rent, $975, plus an extra $75, which Fannie hopes to use for a math tutor. Without the money, Fannie could not have returned to Winthrop.

Businesses in the Rock Hill area helped the raffle by donating products to be awarded as prizes. With the students, faculty and area businesses working together, Fannie's prayer became reality. If we can raise $1000 in a few weeks, just think what we as students are capable of.

We'll have another chance to raise money for the Winthrop Foundation in the "Run for the Future" in February.

Fannie said she had been determined all semester that she would keep her apartment.

It seems Winthrop students can be just as determined to reach their goals.

Letter to the editor

SECURITY UNFAIR

Dear Editor,

During our careers at Winthrop, quite a number of students will feel they have gotten an undeserved ticket from security. One good example is a ticket I got because the back end of my car was parked on a yellow line in front of Sims. According to Officer Mullinax, a car whose back end is over a yellow line deserves to be fined.

Why he is the only officer who feels this petty violation deserves a fine beats me, but it does show inconsistency.

If a student feels security gave an undeserved ticket, he can appeal it to the traffic committee. But unfortunately, this is where the real farce is. Legally, when a citizen is accused of breaking a law, he has the right to be present at a hearing to present a defense. When a Winthrop student is accused of wrongdoing, such as a housing violation, or stealing books, his case is tried with the accused student present at the hearing. But when a student wishes to appeal a ticket, he must first pay the fine before he is allowed to appeal, which assumes the student is guilty until proven innocent. Then he must fill out an "appeals form" which is supposedly discussed at a meeting of the traffic committee. Why is the student (or faculty member) who gets a ticket never allowed to be present at this meeting? Probably because the traffic committee is embarrassed to tell the student that his appeal is rejected. I have never seen a single appeal that the traffic committee has upheld, and judging from some of the ridiculous tickets the committee has let stand, one can only conclude that the present system is merely a sham, a system that allows the school to keep all money collected from traffic fines without any consideration to whether the accused students and faculty members deserve the fine or not. This system will remain a ripoff to all the people involved until those wishing to appeal a ticket are allowed to be present at their hearing, which is, incidentally, provided for by law, instead of filling out a form and waiting until the next semester to get a piece of paper saying, "the traffic committee rejects your appeal and the fine must stand."

People with any questions about this should phone Sam Greer, chairman of the traffic committee at 2101. For starters, try finding who is on the

Can't set time by library clock

Now that the new semester is underway, and everyone is trying to get into classwork again, I again came to the point of trying to meet a deadline and looking for something to write about.

I decided to walk over to the library (no, they weren't giving away free beer) to see whether a problem still exists that has been bugging me for almost four years now.

Let me start at the beginning. I realize that there are many people these days who don't smoke or have quit smoking cigarettes, but I'm not one of those. I'm a smoker. I actually enjoy smoking and have no intention of quitting any time soon. When I was a freshman, I became acquainted with Ida Jane Dacus out of necessity. Naturally I wanted to smoke while studying, so I found a suitable smoking lounge. Things went along well for a while. . . until I looked up on the wall to see what time it was. Lo and behold, the clock was there, but the hands were missing. I really didn't mind because I was sick of studying anyway and I needed a break. After a while, this ritual became tiring. After four years, this clock still has no hands. You either have to wear a watch, bother someone else who has a watch on who is also trying to study, or get up and walk to the nearest wall clock to find out the time of day. For some reason, the idea of getting the clock fixed has either been overlooked or ignored for four years. Look at it as a prime example of energy waste. The clock has been clicking away all of this time without serving any purpose at all. It should be either used or removed. Even if you don't believe in conservation, it's still a pain in the neck to be able to hear the clock clicking away and not being able to benefit from the distraction. I wonder just how many clocks there are in the new coliseum. . . I imagine they all have hands on them.

Semester break needs change

By LYNNE GUEST
TJ contributing editor

Welcome back, groovers! For those of you who weren't around last semester, welcome back, or welcome to college for the first time. You're in for a real treat.

Isn't coming back to a fresh semester terrific? You get to see all your true pals, and new professors, spend big bucks on new books. . . I'll stop while I'm ahead.

Back to seeing friends. . . people greet each other with, "How was your break?" and a common answer is "boring". Personally, I don't think that boredom was so bad, but for some of you, it was a real problem. From what I've heard, a lot of you couldn't get a job over the break, mainly because employers weren't hiring temporary help the week we got home. Our vacation begins one week before Christmas, and the merchants have already gotten the extra help before then.

Senate passed a piece of legislation last year concerning this matter. The bill proposed that the academic calendar be backed up one week to allow more time for Christmas shopping, higher temporary job availability, and less boredom during the last two weeks of vacation. Let's face it, January 1-15 is a long time to have nothing to do (since you couldn't get a temporary job). The break would still last 4 weeks. The new calendar was supposed to be put into effect beginning next year. But judging from the summer school schedule, it doesn't appear that that change will happen any time soon.

I realize that I'm looking at this with a student's viewpoint, but it makes sense for everyone who works here. Come to fall term one week earlier, it ends a week earlier, and the same goes for the spring and summer sessions.

This passed all necessary senate hearings and was signed by the appropriate people. What happened to it? Why isn't anything being done? Yes, the change will require some adjustments, but stranger changes have taken here.

Passing legislation through senate usually makes a difference, because that line of communication from us to the administration is good. They do listen, and care about the students. But some legislation may have gotten lost in the shuffle. If this change isn't feasible, the students should know that, and why. Now is that asking too much?

Fred's cafe looks too good

By JOHN B. GANNON
TJ feature editor

Well, it's time to start a brand new semester, new classes, new ulcers, but as we do there's something we must stop and look at for a second.

Have you seen the "new" cafeteria?

It doesn't look like a cafeteria! At least, not in the sense of a college cafeteria, it doesn't. The joint now looks like something one would find out in the city, a place containing atmosphere, good looks, even attractive serving lines (a New Year's resolution forbids my commenting on the food).

Since I work with the Epicure management in preparing TJ's menu, I knew some time ago that changes were going to be made in the cafeteria, but what the changes were I didn't know; in fact, the final ideas weren't even developed at the time. But before the break I learned, as did the entire populace, that changes would be made concerning the look of the cafeteria. But if the changes to be made would be beneficial or not remained to be seen, at least for four weeks.

So here it is, four weeks later (five when you read this). We've all had a chance to experience the new look by now. What do you think?

Since this is my editorial I get to answer the question now. I like the new look. The greatest improvement without a doubt has to be the permanent departure of those bars. I always felt like a caged monkey in there before (of course there were some individuals who deserved to be caged like monkeys, but that's another editorial).

Now, there's only wide open space barred only by the exits to East and West Thomsons.

There are also the little things. The signs over the conveyor belts are gone. We no longer see "Put your trash in the trash can" or "Do not stack your trays". If we are all the mature individuals we are supposed to be we wouldn't need those signs anyway. But the removal of those signs removes a little more of that "college" look.

The awnings create more of a French cafe appearance. This suggests more of an outside atmosphere as one would find in grande Paris.

The subtle greens and white woodwork detract from those blase college colors we had before—for the better, I might add.

But what will be appreciated most by the college population is the two checker lines instead of the former one. Students can now be checked into the cafeteria at the entrances of both East and West Thomson. Gone forever are the long lines of yesteryear. With two entrances the waiting time to get into the cafeteria has been dramatically cut in half, so we don't have to get in line as early as we once did, especially on the Special nights.

By now I know you're probably saying to yourself, "What's he fussing about?" You're right. What am I fussing about?

Up to this point all I've done is praise the new look and atmosphere of "Fred's Cafe." As of this writing I find nothing wrong with it. So what am I fussing about?

Winthrop College no longer has a common, ordinary college cafeteria, that's what. I feel so deprived now.

Black awareness week begins

By LEANNE SKIPPER
TJ feature reporter

Black Awareness Week, sponsored by the Association of Ebonites, begins Sunday and lasts through Saturday with many activities planned, said Steven Washington, program chairman for Black Awareness Week.

The purpose of Black Awareness Week, according to Washington, is, "for everyone, not just blacks, to come together and to be aware of the contributions of blacks both in the past and in the present."

Beginning the week's activities will be a concert by the Ebonite Choir to be held in Tillman Auditorium at 4 p.m.

On Monday, speaker Dick Gregory will examine social problems. A reception will be held afterwards in McBryde Cafeteria. A small donation will be requested as admission to the lecture.

"Tuesday's activities are still in the planning stage," said Washington. "We are hoping to have a Mr. Ebonite pageant.

A pageant like this has been successful in the past, but for some reason, this year we have not been able to encourage any participants. A local speaker has yet to be determined to speak on the advantages of black students on the Winthrop campus and how these students are using their advantages wisely."

The annual Ebonite Fashion Show will be on Thursday night at 8:30 in Tillman Auditorium. The show will feature men and women from Winthrop's fashion merchandising classes modeling clothes from their own wardrobes.

"Friday night is going to be the highlight of our week," said Washington. On Friday, there will be "A Night at the Apollo Theater" in McBryde at 8 p.m. This will be a tribute to famous blacks in history. These figures will be portrayed by students, demonstrating some of the better moments of black history. Some are: Louie Armstrong, Billie Holiday, Cab Calloway, Nikki Giovanni, Josephine Baker, and Martin Luther King, Jr., to name a few.

Saturday night's Ebony Affair Ball will conclude Black Awareness Week. The band "Acis" will play with admission $3.00 per couple and $2.00 single. The dance will begin at 9 p.m.

Washington pointed out the theme of Black Awareness Week as: "Salute the past, secure the future and be knowledgeable in the fact that the struggle continues."

Dates and schedulings of some of the events are tentative. For more information contact Steven Washington at 3595. He says, "We've been planning since the beginning of the school year for these events, so we hope that everyone will come out and help make our week a success."

"Black Awareness Week is to remind students not to forget what their ancestors have done. This is just not limited to the Winthrop campus, but it goes as far back to the Civil War where the first man killed was Benjamin Benneber, a black man. It extends to the 1983 birthday celebration of Martin Luther King, Jr. and it will go on and on."

Winthrop leaders of cheers

By SUZY COBB
TJ feature reporter

This year the cheerleading squad is using chanting to encourage enthusiasm on the fans' part and undergoing less cheers for pyramids and less lengthy cheers.

"That's our job, to get them to catch the enthusiasm. That's what we want more than anything else. If it wasn't for the fans our job would be meaningless," stated Kim Lewis, co-captain.

Senior Kim Lewis, from Fort Worth, Texas, describes cheerleading as something she feels she can make a contribution to because she loves it so much.

"Cheerleading is important to me. Working with people... that's what cheerleading is all about. That's the part that gives me the greatest thrill," said Kim.

Kim has been cheerleading for 12 years, with every year different.

"It's not an interest that ever gets boring because you've always got something to do, and something always comes up, whether it's a problem or something else," continued Kim.

"Momma" Kim, as she is known by the squad, said in order to be a leader you have to have your "little ducklings" behind you. "They give me a lot of support, and I don't get to tell them that nearly enough. I couldn't have asked for a better squad."

Kim also explained advantages of being a co-captain. They consist of opportunities to be exposed to a business-like format. The process of planning, managing, organizing, and most importantly, budgeting and working with the public gives experience in the business sense. "Another great advantage is that it gives you a lot of good memories," Kim added.

Various aspects involved in cheerleading are frustration, support, professionalism and time budgeting.

The frustration is the hardest part of cheerleading. "To go out there and give it all you've got and feel like you're not getting it back. I want the fans to understand what we're trying to do, that we don't campaign for our position," Kim continued. "The satisfaction from cheerleading doesn't come from being elected as a cheerleader to get 'cheerleader' written across our jacket. The satisfaction comes from seeing those people stand up. So frustration and the greatest thrill go hand-in-hand."

Kim compared the frustration of cheering to fans that just sit there as cheering for a team with a coliseum of empty seats.

Co-captain Kevin Bogle, a senior from Anderson, became a cheerleader mainly to motivate male support. "I wanted to get more guys involved. I've always followed Winthrop, and I noticed there was no male support in the crowd. I figured that by becoming a cheerleader, I may be able to boost some of the support," said Kevin.

Men have been on the squad for two years. The addition of male cheerleaders has been an improvement not only with cheerleading capabilities but also for student enthusiasm.

David McKeown, a junior from Chester, started cheering this year. David characterizes some advantages of having male cheerleaders.

"You increase the diversity of pyramids and double stunts because of the guys being stronger. Also, you can do more lifts with the girls, and a lot more different pyramids involving greater heights and greater weight."

Veronica Hicks, senior from Fountain Inn, expresses her opinion concerning the male cheerleaders as harder work, but she loves it. "The fans seem to react a lot more. We can do more stunts and even feel safer on road trips."

Veronica has been with the squad for four years. "I like to support the team. When you go to the games and you have a lot of spirit, and you sit up in the stands and start yelling, people look at you like you're crazy. I thought I would become a cheerleader, so they would expect that from me," said Veronica.

Jim Hill, a junior from Greer, started cheering this year, also. Jim said the male addition is an improvement. "Although, I think we could do more with it than we do, by doing more stunts besides standing around on the sidelines."

Out for blood

One of the worst problems facing the Winthrop Intramural department in January is where are they going to get referees to call games for intramural basketball.

Why is this a problem? Because intramural referees are students and no student wants to take the flack received calling the games. Though these refs may try hard, when they blow a whistle they make an instant 5 enemies. People take the games too seriously.

But perhaps this year Winthrop has the answer. Two different leagues within a league are to be formed. One will be the normal type ball that intramurals have played in the past, and then there is to be something like a fun division.

This division is for those souls who are more interested in fellowship and less interested in winning. This league will also help rid the league of the dreaded blowout. You remember some of those: 99 to 1; 300 to 6. By eliminating one sided games it will make every game more competitive and interesting.

This is not to say you can't be competitive and play in the fun league. I believe a person can be mature and level-headed and still be a competitor.

Now let's look at the other side of the fence. If you are playing in the more serious league it does not mean you can abuse the officials. It's going to be hard enough to get people to call the games now. In the future it may be impossible.

As I said before, I think the new league is a good idea. I think it will make intramurals more competitive and maybe put the fun back into it.

The only question I have is why does there have to be a fun league? I thought all intramurals were supposed to be fun and full of fellowship. When did friends stop playing friends? When did the other team become the enemy and not our school mates?

Fun league offered

By WILLIAM GODSHALL
TJ sports writer

The 1983 winter spring intramural sports program will get underway this semester with a series of activities for the students and faculty.

These activities will include "an all new and interesting basketball program," according to Steve Moore, Intramural director. This new program, which will start this season, will consist of a change in the way the leagues have been organized in the past.

Moore said this has been brought about because there has been a problem because some teams are better staffed which has caused a lot of mismatches to take place.

He also said there has been a problem in the way some teams were "out for blood and guts," while other teams just wanted to go out and have a good time. This has prompted the Intramural department to organize two separate leagues. One will be a fun league for the teams that just want to go out and have a good time.

There will also be a serious league for the teams who want to compete on a higher competitive level. The rosters are due for both men and women, and coed divisions in both leagues Friday.

The Intramural Department will offer a clinic for people interested in officiating in this year's Intramural games on January 31 in room 136. The officials of these games will be paid work study pay $2.80 per hour.

Moore said that we can look forward in the near future of being able to use the nautilus equipment which is located at the field house. The Intramural Department will soon be posting hours when the students will be able to use the new equipment.

He also said we can look forward to March 4, when the rosters are due for the soccer and softball leagues.

Since the entire athletic department has been on a budget freeze, we probably will not see the completion of the handball and racquetball courts.

The Intramural Department has been under the athletic department for one semester, and Moore said that the two have been able to work together for the benefit of both departments.

Steve Moore also wanted to let the commuting students know that they are eligible to compete in all the Winthrop College Intramural sports program.

Carolina plays at Winthrop

By LENNIE PHILYAW
TJ sports editor

There were three games played in the Winthrop Coliseum Monday, Jan. 17. Winthrop won one of these games, Winthrop lost one of these games, and the University of South Carolina rolled in the other.

Though three games were played it was billed as the Winthrop College doubleheader. In the first game of the night the Lady Eagles beat High Point College 65-56. In the second game the Winthrop men's basketball team was downed by the Warriors of Central Wesleyan 73-44 and in the third game South Carolina thumped Brooklyn College 81-63.

The Lady Eagles, of Coach Karen Brown, were led by Paula Polyanski, who scored 16 points and blocked a record 8 shots. Joining Polyanski in double figures were Candy Cage with 14 points and forward Nancy Archer with 12.

The win improved Winthrop's record to 8-6 and was their fifth consecutive win.

The Winthrop men's team did not fair as well as the ladies' team. The Eagles (7-9) fell behind 25-20 at half time and slowly let Central Wesleyan pull away as the Warriors (9-5) outscored Winthrop 48-24 in the second half.

The Eagles, who were led by Dan McQueen's 10 points, hit only 18 of 66 shots for a 27.2 percent shooting average.

"We just weren't ready," said Winthrop head coach Nield Gordon. "We didn't have one person on our team play up to his ability. It was a complete team failure."

Gordon stated that this kind of game seems to always happen to the Eagles on the day school opens up.

In the 8:30 game history was made at Winthrop as the University of South Carolina played one of their home basketball games on the Winthrop campus.

The Gamecocks (10-3) took a 39-28 halftime lead over Brooklyn and were never really threatened in the second half. The Gamecocks had a 57.4 FG percentage and hit 18 of 29 free throws.

Leading the way for Carolina was Jimmy Foster who scored 19 points and pulled down 9 rebounds while only playing 26 minutes of the game.

Kenny Holmes scored 18 points for Carolina, almost 10 points above his season average of 8.2.

High scorers for Brooklyn were Charles Wigfall (20) and Rich Micallef (18).

Brooklyn head coach, Mark Reiner said, "Sometimes we play well against division teams. But tonight we were outclassed. I think the program won the game. When Foster runs a program it's a team effort."

Assistant Carolina Coach Steve Steinwedel, who took over for Bill Foster after the head coach's heart attack, was pleased with his team's effort.

"We played pretty well but much better in the second half," said Steinwedel. "Once we got into our offense against the man-to-man defense I was really pleased."

Steinwedel was impressed with the scrappy Brooklyn team. "I thought they played a good basketball game," said Steinwedel. "We had a 16-point lead and made a couple of mistakes they took advantage of."

Steinwedel said that he enjoyed playing at the Winthrop Coliseum and said they would like to come back. "It was a good opportunity for the people in the Rock Hill area to see our team," he said.

Winthrop Athletic Director Nield Gordon was pleased with the evening's games but said he was somewhat dissatisfied with the student turnout. "We realized that they just got back to school but we thought there would be more of them here," said Gordon. "We're trying to do everything we can to entertain the students. We want them to come because they want to come."

Eagles play through the holidays

By ROBERT JOLLY
TJ sportswriter

Though the Winthrop students had a long break for the holiday, the Men's Basketball team did not. They played six games with a win-loss record of three wins and three losses.

The team played two games before Christmas. These games were played on December 17, and December 19. The team had a break until January 5th. The basketball team then played four games after Christmas, before classes started back again. The men's team played on January 5, January 8, January 13, and January 15. The Eagles have played three games since school started back.

The Eagles had a record of five wins and five losses going into the break. After the Christmas break the team had a record of eight wins and eight losses.

The Eagles' first game during the holidays was against Lenoir Rhyne on December 17. The Eagles won this game with a score of 94-76.

The Eagles' third game was against the University of South Carolina at Spartanburg on January 5. The University of South Carolina at Spartanburg won this game by a score of 98-62.

The Eagles' fourth game was against College of Charleston in a tournament on January 8. The College of Charleston won this game with a score of 58-56. This contest was close until the very end, when the College of Charleston hit a last second shot to win.

The Eagles' fifth game was against Lander at Lander on January 13. The Eagles won this game by a score of 48-47. The Eagles' sixth game was against the University of South Carolina at Aiken. The Eagles won this game by a score of 84-80.

After 11 games of play, McQueen has been the top scorer in 5 games. Gaither has been the top scorer in 5 games, and Morris has been the top scorer in one of the 11 games.

The Eagles have played three games since the break, and they play their fourth game tonight. The Eagles would appreciate continued support from the students.
